

Profile & Video: Clara Lofaro

October 7, 2010 3 Comments

The award for “Best Use of Strawberry Shaped Helium Balloons in a Music Video” goes to...Clara Lofaro! What’s not to like?

And we’re going to have to follow-up on her answer to our question about a first gig – a funeral.

Read more below and feel free to comment.

Name: Clara Lofaro

Home-base: New York City via Boston via Toronto, Canada

Where do you find your writing inspiration: all around me, in life experience and being inspired by other music I take in

First gig you ever played: a funeral

Favorite song/most inspirational song as a kid: Fast Car, Tracy Chapman

First song you learned to play: A classical piece, first pop song was probably, “Let it Be.”

Artist you’d most like to be on stage with: Bonnie Raitt

Things you are juggling: Promoting my new record, self-titled, Clara Lofaro, finding a place to live, day job as a paralegal, writing for signed artists and for TV/Film placement opportunities, seeing my family in Canada as often as I can

Biggest challenge about being an independent musician: Trying to balance personal life and music life because it’s a lifestyle, not just a job.

Best thing about being an independent musician: Feeling inspired by what I do every day, never getting bored of it and feeling like I am doing something meaningful with my life

Gear you use: piano, keyboards (Casio Privia and Yamaha Motif)

Dream gear?: Nord
